

Timothy Hager
Vice President - Communications

Timothy Hager is Vice President – Communications for Foundation For The Carolinas in Charlotte, N.C. – the fifth-largest community foundation in the United States. In this role, he oversees public relations, social media, speechwriting and crisis communications for the Foundation.

At Foundation For The Carolinas, Timothy has helped lead several large-scale communications projects, such as the redesign and launch of the updated www.ffc.org websites, the creation of a Crisis Communications Plan and the launch of the Foundation’s storytelling website, www.philanthropyFOCUS.org.

Timothy has more than 25 years of experience in communications, first serving as a sports reporter, theatre critic, features editor and editor-in-chief for several newspapers and websites, including AOL, Golf.com, the Beaufort Gazette in Beaufort, S.C., and Up & Coming Weekly in Fayetteville, N.C. He previously handled marketing and public relations in leadership roles with the Arts Center of Coastal Carolina on Hilton Head, S.C., and Children’s Theatre of Charlotte.

A graduate of Appalachian State University, Timothy spends his free time volunteering for local theatres as an actor and writer.
